Welcome back!

In one word, how are you feeling today?

What was your epiphany about the meaning of legitimacy?

Agenda

01 Rapid recap (15 min)

02 Building legitimacy (25 min)

03 Small group exercise (25 min)

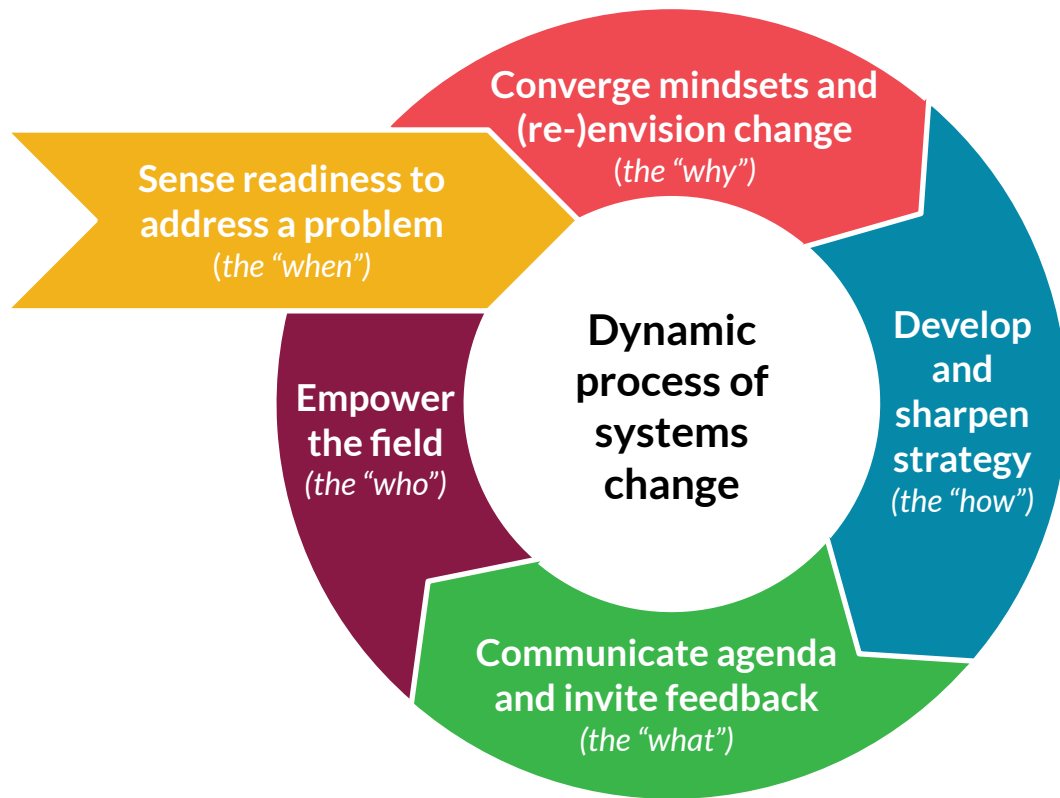

04 Share out (25 min)

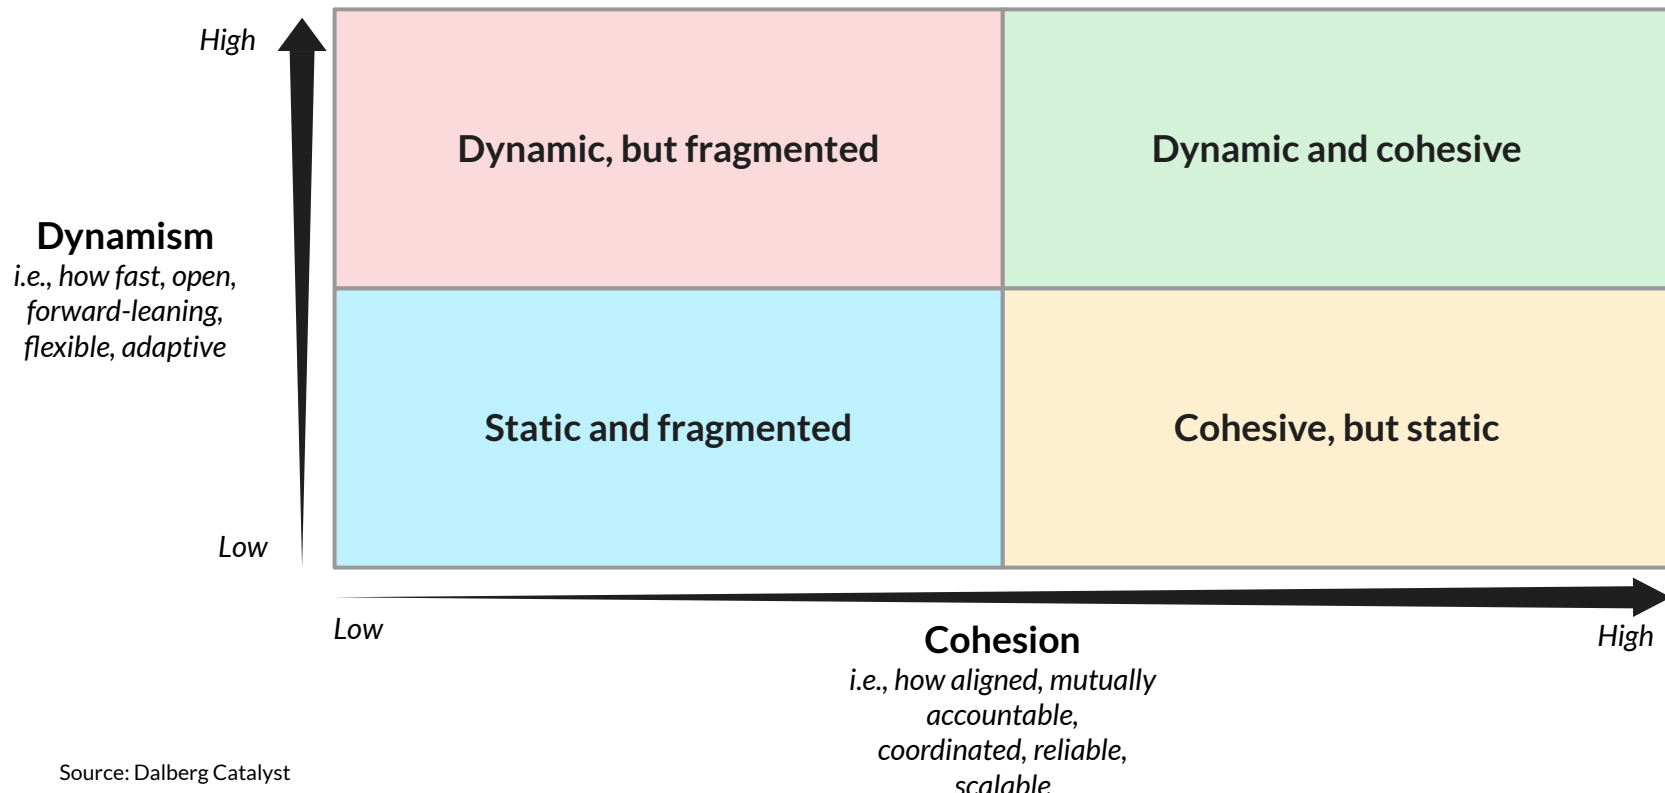

01 Rapid recap

1 Rapid recap

Systems change is a dynamic process

Systems are more ready for change when the field of relevant actors is dynamic and cohesive

1

Rapid recap

Dialogue is essential for (re-)envisioning a system actions

and establish a common understanding of what we are trying to accomplish, some form of dialogue must be used if we are to make

Strategies for systems change focus on primary actors and feature practices of systems work

Primary actors are people at points of highest complexity in a system—at the nexus of all the issues.

Cultivate collectives that exchange perspectives, align understandings, share identities, set goals, and/or pool ideas

Equip problem solvers

by building skills for dialogue, systems thinking, strategic thinking, leadership, and/or management

Promote platforms

that enable different groups to access relationships, evidence, intelligence, expertise, and/or resources

Disrupt policies and patterns by shifting rules, laws, rights, norms, practices, procedures, standards, expectations, and/or guidance

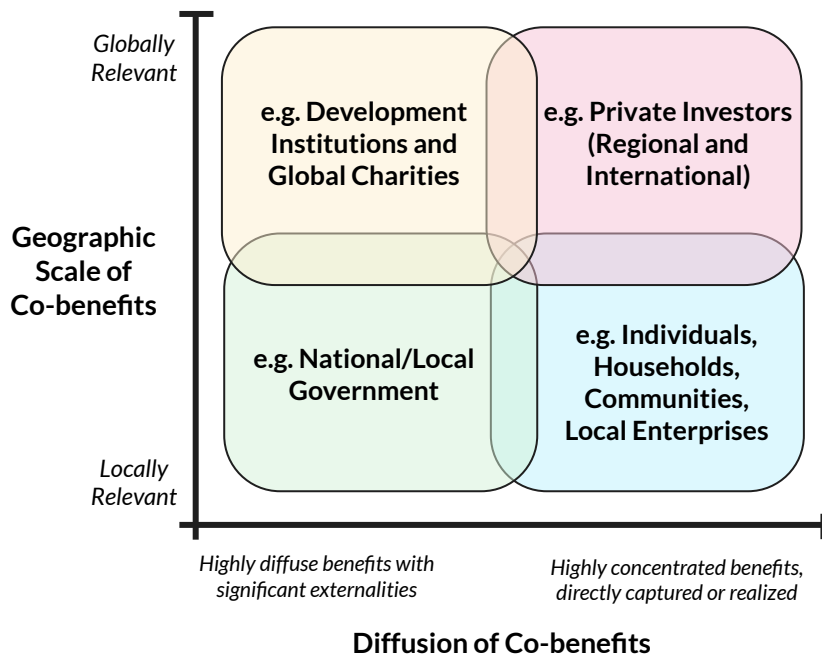

Rapid recap

1 Communications (including storytelling) can lead partners to recognize co-benefits and contribute support

Who could co-benefit (and how)?

How could they contribute?

EXECUTION

- Make day-to-day decisions and deliver activities
- Recruit and motivate others to complete activities
- Act as first-responder to unforeseen needs

INPUTS

- Provide financing for upfront costs, working capital
- Acquire and fund human resources for support
- Make in-kind contributions of materials or services

INFLUENCE

- Promote through advertising or word-of-mouth
- Engage and empower additional stakeholders
- Build multi-stakeholder coalitions

INNOVATION

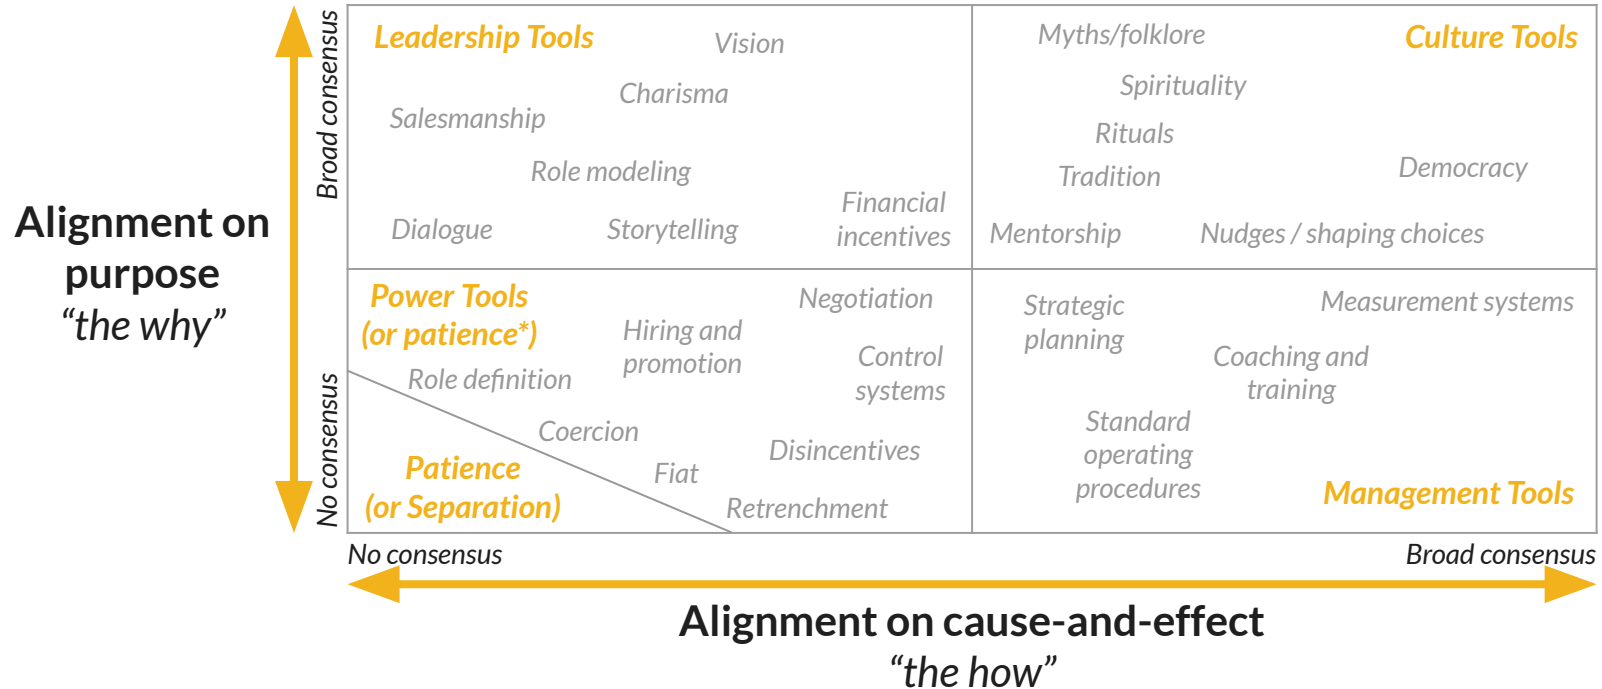

- Bring diverse perspectives and discover issues and ideas
- Refresh direction and strategies
- Invent and pioneer alternative approaches

Rapid recap

1 Different tools can help empower the field depending on the level of alignment on “why and how”

Tools of Cooperation and Change

Source: adapted from “The Tools of Cooperation and Change” by Clayton M. Christensen, Matt Marx and Howard H. Stevenson, published in Harvard Business Review (2006)

Note: (*) Patience – e.g., research – may be required when there is no sufficiently legitimate means of exercising tools of power to directly influence cooperation and change

Building legitimacy is critical throughout the process

- Building legitimacy is critical to scale change and sustain change at scale
- Primary actors, who are closest to the issues, have the most legitimacy
- Actions with insufficient legitimacy (e.g., technical without contextual) almost always have unintended consequences
- “Authorizers” (sources of legitimacy) vary by context and from one scale to the next

02 Building legitimacy

2 Legitimacy-building is an interplay between problem solvers and process authorizers

Substantive roles to sense the problem and deliver a solution

1. Diagnose and communicate problems
2. Generate ideas
3. Drive/support implementation

Address
the problem

Authori ze the approach

Relational & procedural roles to enable the process

4. Convene and moderate dialogue
5. Connect across distributed agents
6. Provide legitimate “cover” / formal authorization
7. Motivate and inspire change
8. Empower other actors
9. Provide financial support

Integrative roles (cross-cutting)

10. Catalyze and steward efforts to address the problem and authorize the approach

Mapping your authorizing environment can reveal opportunities to connect sources and uses of legitimacy

For the next 10 minutes, we will break into small groups of 2-3

- Spend 3-5mins (each) identifying your “authorization needs”, i.e., potential uses and additional sources of legitimacy
- Capture your notes in an empty worksheet (one per person) in this shared document
- When we return, we will briefly reflect together before turning to our next exercise
